Mondu has the winning record in the history of the Fight Palace. He began his career on Glurst, but moved onto the tougher palaces before opening his own in '48, where he has reigned the last two seasons. In 2549 he suffered three defeats, losing to Stump, Edwina and Behemoth before beating Stump for the title in what is considered the best final match ever. Allegations Mondu threw the bouts to bolster his fledgling palace's receipts were dismissed, however rumors continue unabated. Mondu's famous tongue is insured for over $1 million with Mutual of Omicron.

Slasher is looking great this year. His sharp exterior is in fine form, as he demonstrated last April at the Glaron Nationals when he decapitated three fans and a journalist from Gnarsh. The Slash is turning out to be as good a businessman as he is a fighter. He has just signed a lucrative contract with Galactic Ginsu, and his chain of Slasher's Slash 'N Burn Cutlery 'N Camping stores has grown to 200.

Rex's hobbies are martial arts, electric guitar, and eating small, furry animals raw. A graduate of Harvard University, he recently received his Ph.D in Classical Torture and Dwarf Tossing. In addition, Rex holds the Earth record for Most Decapitations in a Single Year. Despite his unassuming appearance, Rex has surprised many opponents with his tendency to go berserk any time anyone insults the San Francisco 49ers.

Known on his home planet as the "Boy Wonder," Puff Boy is currently ranked 3rd on the Galactic Press Top 20. His nickname derives from the fact that he is only 78 years old, a mere babe by Puffar standards. Decidedly cynical and aloof, he is a true "Puff Without a Cause," who rides a Harley and smokes harsh, unfiltered cigarettes. Puff Boy had his best season ever last year, defeating Slasher, Scorpion, Colonoid, and fighting Hydroid to a draw. The year was marred, however, by his close loss to Trebor.

This wacky fellow likes to form himself into the shape of a small taxi and then engulf and eat the unsuspecting tourists who hail him for rides. Look for Colonoid to be as antisocial as ever this year as he plots ways to defeat the top-ranked Falman. Colonoid is recovering from a devastating incident after last season, when half of his right shoulder split off from the colony and declared itself an independent neo-syndicate religious commune. In the ensuing warfare, the Colonoid almost suppressed himself into oblivion.

Rubic had a difficult time last year. Several software bugs were discovered in his personality ROMS. These caused him to think at times that he was a long extinct Cocker Spaniel, a small kitchen appliance, and a ball peen hammer. In addition, he was infected with a virus which deleted most of his left leg. He has since undergone a complete software upgrade, and should prove to be a much stronger fighter this year.

Freezer is freshly recovered from his epic confrontation with Flamer, a fight that destroyed 17 ecosystems and devastated thousands of acres of lush woodlands.

Recently given the lead role in Megagalactic's new holo-version of Romeo and Juliet, Behemoth is clearly capitalizing on his fight palace fame. Efforts are underway to boost his intelligence through judicious injections of Yak hormones. Behemoth (or just "The Hemoth" as he's known by his legions of admirers) continues to do well in the fight palaces. Behemoth's "Gasser" is sponsored by fifteen corporations, including Galactic Natural Gas and Dr. Skoler's Odor Eaters.

Known as the "First Lady of the Fight Palaces," Edwina has had a colorful career. Her brash comments to the press and her quaint rallying cry of "Let me tear you a new one" have kept her on the minds of fight fans everywhere. Last season she beat Mondy the Fat himself in one of the controversial "fledgling fights." Edwina hangs out with the hot band Lupo the Butcher and is known for slam-dancing the night away before and after her bouts.

The Bulgar champion, Stump believes in "high fiber, good scotch, the hanging curveball, and long, deep, slow face-smashings that last three days." Stump has had a complex ever since losing to Mondy the Fatman in 2087, when he was a victim of the famous "Tongue-Lashing Where the Sun Don't Shine." The tabloids have made a big deal over the bad blood between Stump and Mondy. Apparently, Mondy denied Stump a management position at his fledgling fight palace in 2549, marking "Fighting: 10, Brains: 1" on Stump's evaluation. Watch for Stump to be a strong contender for the Galactic Title this year.
